

Special Olympics golfers back in town

The world's biggest golf tournament for people with intellectual disabilities will see golfers from 25 delegations hitting the greens at Caesars Golf Macau from April 19 to 22.

For the sixth edition athletes and coaches from as far away as South Africa and as near as Hong Kong joining the event, Canada is this year's enthusiastic newcomer.

Support is not only being extended by long-time host Caesars Golf Macau but this year sees the Tak Chun Group stepping in and becoming the official title sponsor of this meaningful event. Furthermore, the local business fraternity of MGM Macau, Melco Crown Entertainment and Wynn Macau are consolidating their positions as main partners.

With continuous growth the event enjoys tremendous positive response from the Special Olympics community, as well as family members and people connected with them.

Bringing together the business world and the local society of Macau with international Special Olympics athletes through this competition is key to the ultimate objective of enhancing inclusion through sport.

"This year, 20 countries and regions will attend the tournament that is putting again the name of Macau firmly on the sports map," said Paulo A. Azevedo, President of the Charity Association of Macau Business Readers. "We just hope that we will continue to enjoy the support of both private and public institutions so that this major event will continue to demonstrate in no uncertain manner how Macau cares about everyone, not just some of its citizens."
